

Livestock Director
The South Ormsby Estate, Lincolnshire Wolds

The South Ormsby Estate is a landscape of inspiration, known for its beauty, high biodiversity and cultural history, it is maintained by a thriving local economy and is based on sustainable use of natural resources and local enterprise. This offers a high quality and unique experience for locals and visitors alike, just as past neighbour Alford Lord Tennyson would have enjoyed nearly 200 years ago.

The Estate's mission is to provide a mixed organic farming system to support an area of high biodiversity across both animals and plants, giving visitors opportunities to further their passions in understanding birds, butterflies, moths, insects, bats, mammals, fungi, flowers through tours and events showcasing the latest farming and techniques in this extraordinary setting.

The Estate is now looking for a real leader in the field of sustainability in livestock farming. This role will involve representing South Ormsby Estate at regional, national and international events, lobbying government on green farming and advising the estate on the most innovative ways of reverting to a natural and sustainable farming ecosystem. We want South Ormsby to be a world leader so we need a livestock focused farming and sustainability pioneer to come on board and help us achieve this ambition.

The role will involve:

- Managing all of the heads of departments across livestock and sustainability
- Representing South Ormsby during onsite events and local, national and international events
- Ensuring South Ormsby are embracing their vision of sustainability
- Supervising all wildlife-related matters
- Embracing biodiversity and bringing
- Working with other senior members of the team including our expert in arable farming and the retails and marketing manager commercial side of the business

You will be:

- A visionary and a leader in the field of wildlife, animals and biodiversity
- Knowledgeable and credible on sustainable farming including organic and pasture for life
- Passionate about green farming and all its potential
